Folding Bar Stools

Sometimes, typical barstools don't work for everyone. For example, if you live in a small apartment with a small kitchen bar that adjoins the living room, you have to be creative to maximize floor space. One way to do this would be with folding kitchen counter bar stools that can be put in the pantry or closet between meals. Collapsible bar stools are made for easy storage, and work for many living situations, not just those where space is at a premium.

Folding bar stools and chairs are tried and true technology: they were even used by the ancient Greeks, Romans, and Egyptians for their dual abilities to provide seating and store easily when not needed.

Folding bar stools can be made of wood, plastic, or metal. Some have padded seats, and some don't. Generally, the simpler the design, the more compactly it will fold, and the easier it will be to store. They can also be terrific additions to your regular bar stools. If you do a lot of home entertaining, a half dozen folding bar stools in a storage closet will make the environment much more comfortable for guests. And when the guests go away, the folding bar stools go away, too!

If you own a business, even if it has nothing to do with bars, a dozen folding bar stools in storage can be a great convenience for meetings that end up being larger than expected. The taller bar stools can be placed in the back of the room, overlooking the regular furniture. And they're extremely handy for office parties, particularly if family members will be joining workers.

If your home is short on closet space as well as floor space, folding bar stools can be stored in other ways. For example, many designs can hang from hooks on a wall in a garage, similar to how you would store a bicycle. Some designs fold up flat enough to go under a bed.

For outdoor entertaining, folding bar stools can't be beat. A dozen of them living in your storage shed will be perfect for a backyard barbecue with friends. And if you have a place outdoors for them to reside permanently, they can be bought in finishes that are weather resistant. Like regular bar stools, folding bar stools are available in different heights, with 24 inch bar stools and 30 inch bar stools being the most common. The 24 inch bar stools are made to go with the slightly lower kitchen counter, while the 30 inch bar stools are made to go with a standard 42 inch tall bar.

Even the new 36 inch bar stools can sometimes be found in collapsible style. The long, elegant lines of these bar stools give them a graceful presence when set around a 45 to 48 inch tall pub table. Even if you purchase an entire set of traditional bar stools, it may be a good idea to stash a few folding bar stools away for those extra friends that will want to see your home bar setup.

Modern Bar Stools

Modern furniture can be made either to stand out boldly and demand attention, or it can be so subtle it almost disappears into its surroundings. Perhaps the key feature of modern furniture design is that it joins function and form, sometimes in unexpected ways. Strong geometry, clean lines, neutral shades, asymmetry, and polished surfaces are all characteristics of modern design. Modern bar stools are no different. Much of the flexibility of modern furniture design comes from its traditional clean, simple lines. Even the “finishing touches” from 1920s and 1930s architecture – the birthplace of modern furniture – are simple and clean in design.

If your home is decorated in a modern style, clearly modern bar stools will complement the décor. But even if your home contains antique or more traditional styling modern bar stools can be worked into the environment to great effect. While an injection-molded clear Lucite bar stool will look odd paired with a grand oak bar, there are modern styles that can work well.

For example, a model called the “Juno” from a company called Home Decorators Collection is definitely modern looking with its curving, asymmetric back, and yet because it is made in soft, dark leather, with traditionally designed legs, it would look right at home in traditionally furnished surroundings. The addition of modern bar stools to your home or business can take a “stale” traditional look and customize it, giving décor individuality and flair.

Lacquered finishes are also popular on modern bar stools. Lacquers used today contain a resin called nitrocellulose which allows one coat of lacquer to bind into a previous coat. After numerous coats, lacquer finishes are very hard. Lacquered finishes on modern bar stools can be made in bright colors to stand out, or in muted browns and grays to blend in to surroundings. Lacquer finished bar stools may not be suitable for use in the outdoors. Outdoor bar stools are susceptible to ultraviolet radiation, which can fade the finish. One great feature of modern bar stools is that they are generally slender in design and fit comfortably underneath the ledge of a bar. While 30-inch bar stools go with bars of traditional height, 24-inch bar stools are made to go with the slightly shorter kitchen bar. It is easy to push most modern styles up under the ledge of a bar and out of the way of foot traffic.

While modern bar stools usually take up less space than more traditional designs, it is still a good rule of thumb to allow 25 to 28 inches between the center of one bar stool and the center of the next. Some interior designers suggest measuring the length of your bar in inches, and then dividing the number by 28 to estimate how many bar stools you will need. Adjust for a little more room for bar stool designs that have arms or for swivel bar stools.

Modern bar stools emphasize originality and technical innovation, and they make a definite statement about your style and décor. It is up to you to decide whether you want that statement to be bold and outgoing or quiet and subtle.

Red bar stools

There are many varieties of red bar stools available in the online market. Retro bar stools, swivel bar stools, adjustable bar stools and modern bar stools are all available in different type of red colors. Commonly red bar stools covers bar stools with colors like pure red, magenta, chilly red, cherry red and brownish red. Red bar stools are available in all types of materials as well. Swivel Bar Stools

While it is unclear who made the first swivel bar stool, the third president of the United States, Thomas Jefferson, is credited with inventing the swivel chair. Not only are they fun to sit in, they make conversing with your neighbors easier, since you can turn to face them without contorting your back. Swivel bar stools add an element of neighborliness to your bar design. With non-swiveling bar stools, everyone is basically lined up and facing in the same direction rather than facing each other as with a dining table. Swivel chairs provide a more sociable atmosphere by making it easier to rotate to face one's neighbor. The fact that a bar stool swivels is often cleverly camouflaged. Designs that you would swear were immobile will often swivel, no matter how old fashioned their style. Swivel bar stools require a little more room at a bar than non-swiveling bar stools so that people's knees don't bump. This is especially true for swivel bar stools with backs or arms. While non-rotating bar stools should be spaced with 25 to 28 inches from the center of one stool to the center of the next, closer to 30 inches is preferable for swivel bar stools.

Swivel bar stools are available in any bar stool design you can imagine. From the simplest round kitchen counter bar stools to the most elaborately decorated, ornate wrought iron bar stool with leather trim, pretty much any bar stool can be made to swivel. This means that if you are going to be buying bar stools, you can choose any design you like and chances are, if you want a model just like it that swivels, one can be had. Swivel bar stools add a welcome element of comfort to rustic designs reminiscent of the old west, and they can be a welcome oasis of comfort in a starkly modern environment.

You shouldn't be afraid to mix it up a bit, either. If you want to warm up an overtly modern décor, you can find swivel bar stools in simple designs that won't clash with the clean lines of the other furniture, but have "warm" features like leather or upholstery. Conversely, you can update a very traditional, old fashioned décor by choosing swivel bar stools that bridge the gap between dated and modern without clashing.

Another style of swivel bar stool that is gaining popularity is the 36-inch bar stool. These extra tall designs are made to go with tall pub tables. These extra tall swivel bar stools do not work well with a standard 42 inch bar, because there isn't enough room for the sitter's legs. However, in recent years, kitchen counters, bars, and tables are being manufactured in heights of 45 to 48 inches, and for these tall pieces of furniture, the standard 30 inch swivel bar stool is too short.

Many people simply like the look of tall bar stools and the new, taller counters and bars, but for tall people – say over 6 foot 3, the taller swivel bar stools are much more comfortable than the standard 30 inch bar stools. As for aesthetic considerations, the long, elegant legs on extra tall swivel bar stools are eye catching and look terrific in your home or business.

Regardless of what type of décor you are buying bar stools for, you're sure to find many suitable models with swivel seats as well as stationary seats. By being a little more comfortable for talking with the people on each side of you, swivel bar stools add a level of warmth and sociability to any style of bar stool.

Tall bar stools

Measuring the exact height of the tall bar stool is very important. The standard seat height of tall bar stools is 30 inches. The space from the counter to the seat should be from 8 to 12 inches. The need for the tall bar stools is to make easy reach to the food served on the high counters which is very common in the bar. Tall bar stools also can provide comfortable seating with the foot rail. You can get a choice like counter height bar stools. There are various choices available in the free market like backless bar stools, Wicker bar stools, counter height bar stools, adjustable bar stool, aluminum bar stool antique bar stools, bamboo bar stools, counter height bar stools etc.

There are backed tall bar stools and backless bar stools available according to your need. If you like you can also try for metal swivel bar stools, antique bar stools, kitchen counter bar stools, oak bar stools ,retro bar stool, aluminum bar stool, maple bar stools and leather swivel bar stools which gives comfortable seating with tall bar stool, style and durability. Remember backless bar stools are designed for temporary sitting. Tall bar stools come in a variety of seat choices and are available in different materials. There are generally three types of tall bar stools when you opt for backless bar stools, the standard round seat which has a smooth surface, the saddle dish which conforms to the body surface, and the round cushion which has a wood base and comes with a padded cushion in the fabric. If your bar height is 48 inch then you should buy a 36bar stool. Many sellers have the ability adjust the height of the tall bar stools according to your need.

If you want to buy a tall bar stool which gives comfort then buy tall bar stool with a back and an arm. The arm provides comfort while eating or drinking. You can enjoy the food with your family while chatting for longer time very easily. The only problem with this kind of tall bar stools is that they would require more space at the counter or bar. When you do buy bar stools with arms then take a note of the turning space while installation of the tall bar stools. You may get this facility in metal bar stool, oak bar stool, furniture bar stools, antique bar stools, maple bar stools, leather bar stool, old world bar stools. The adjustable bar stool, folding bar stool, bamboo bar stools usually do not have this option.

To summarize things about tall bar stools, it can be said that mainly the tall bar stools are used in bar and kitchen. The tall bar stools are a great choice as they provide style, comfort and durability. Also they are very useful for the tall height persons. The right height is the most important thing in the good buy of right height of your bar stools so that you and your guests can feel comfortable seated at your home bar or kitchen table.
